

Test of Trust

*“Don't ask "How can I get?"
Ask "How can I give and share?"
That's the language of Life.”*

I followed my heart's desire to merge with Divine Mother, Goddess Life, in the deep silence of the night. I called her twice from the fullness of my heart. This time, she appeared formless, enveloping me with her energetic presence. I suddenly found myself in a school of life, a physical building, where hundreds of students were given thick piles of papers. Each sheet of paper was a test of life. I, too, received a pile of tests. We all sat in a hall that seemed infinitely large. Each of us sat behind a desk, with many teachers moving through the space to administer the test. Just a few rows next to my left sat an energetic young man in his mid 20s. His attitude was rather cocky. He kept loudly addressing the teachers as well as the students, proclaiming he would easily figure out the answers to the tests of life we were given. I looked at the text on the sheets and read just a few questions. They were not small questions at all. ‘What is the meaning of life?’ was just one of them. ‘What is the purpose of human existence?’; another not so trivial question, humans have been asking since the beginning of time. As I looked at the test; and heard the overly confident remarks of the young man next to me; something unexpected happened. I experienced an instantaneous knowing of the meaning of life and my consciousness expanded into infinite understanding of all aspects of life and human existence. As I experienced the vastness of my consciousness; I became aware of Divine Mother’s presence. She approached me, still in a formless state. She grabbed me and the young man next to me and she propped us on an extremely tall, thin pillar. We found ourselves holding on to the top of a pillar about 1,500 feet tall. Normally, being stuck on the top of a thin, tall pillar that seemed very unstable, with another human being, would make me panic with indescribable fright. But with my newly expanded consciousness, I gained a new perspective on life as well as fear of danger or death. There was no fear of anything in my mind. I was filled with the knowing that life is guaranteed, and life can’t be lost. The pillar started to fall sideways, as if we headed to crash with the ground beneath us. I felt complete peace but so did my partner in this unexpected adventure. The young man, whose name I did not know, and I, both held on comfortably to the top of the pillar that was about two by two feet in width. Just before we hit the ground, the pillar lifted and reversed in direction, swinging back up to its original vertical position. It was clear that we passed the test of trust in life and the ability to display complete fearlessness, not based in ignorance but deeply rooted in our knowing and understanding of life's eternal nature. One more invisible push and the pillar began to fall again. Imagine falling from a structure 1,500 feet up high. This time, the test became more intricate. A new born child appeared out of nowhere in my hands, as I was falling to the ground, still somehow attached to the top of the pillar. My understanding of what the test was telepathic and instantaneous. I knew that now I had to prove I could remain calm and behold the newly gained consciousness that life is never threatening and there is nothing to fear as life is simply loving and eternal. I watched the small baby in my arms as we were about to hit the ground again. My heart was unshakably peaceful. No trace of fear managed to sneak into my being. Once again, as we managed to remain fully connected to the goodness of life, the pillar disappeared. We knew we passed the test.

In that moment, another expansion of my consciousness took over me. I was shifted into another complete knowing that there are no tests in life. This was a huge surprise to me. It felt like everything I ever believed about life and spirituality dissolved. Life suddenly became a playground into which we are thrown by the Mother. As I was exploring this realization, Divine Mother spoke to me. “All that you know to be human existence is a construct. The fear, the struggle, the tests, all the situations you find yourselves in as human beings, living your individual lives, with all the experiences and memories– all of that is just a construct.” She repeated that over and over “It is just a construct.” With my expanded, seemingly unlimited consciousness, I totally knew what she meant. Nothing in our lives, the dramas, the stories, the pleasures, the successes, the emotions, the tests; none of that is reality. As she said, the most accurate description of human existence was ‘a construct’. I was surprised to learn that even the tests of life are not real. Divine Mother continued to explain, “There is nothing to be found about the meaning of life. Life just is and you all are here because I threw you into this adventure. Just live it fully and ignite love in your hearts for Life.” What? I summarized all that she was sharing in my mind. ‘There is nothing to be tested about. There is nothing to figure out. There is nothing to fear. There is no way to fail. The only suggestion she had was to love life and feel love in our hearts?’

I felt another shift in my consciousness. The only way to embrace the fullness of what the Mother was sharing, was to become utterly free, utterly unlimited, utterly empty, except of being in love with all Life.

I found myself again in the classroom where the test was conducted. It was clear that the test itself was an illusion and to pass it, one had to realize there is nothing to figure out, no answer to give, no test to succeed in. To realize that, was to awaken into a state of ultimate freedom with no constructs, ideas or beliefs, obstructing the ability to perceive the fullness of Life. It seemed that Divine Mother wanted to be certain I fully embodied the consciousness of fearlessness. The fact that there was no test to pass and yet she was obviously testing my trust by making me fall down 1,500 feet was a conundrum. So was the fact that now she pushed me into a dark water canal that was filled with swimming snakes. The sky above me was dark and I could barely see. Under normal circumstances, being thrown into a dark water way, surrounded by snakes and overshadowed by a dark sky, would cause me to panic, fight for my life and run far and fast out and away from the canal. But knowing what I now knew, I had zero human fear. I actually did not feel any resistance to my situation. With my head under the water surface, I noticed large turds of human feces lying on the sandy bottom of the stream. My goal was to keep moving with the stream afloat with a minimal movement of my legs in order to avoid sticking my feet in the shit (excuse my language). Finally, I reached the end of stream, where it naturally let me get out. I managed to stay clean but I felt that my skin would enjoy a shower to remove any residue of the smell of the water I just emerged from. Divine Mother whispered, "Your trust is unwavering." I remembered her words "I just throw my children into Life." I wondered if the turds lying at the bottom of the water canal represented the not so attractive aspects of life, the problems, arguments, the shit we get to face in life and yet, somehow, we are asked not to come into engaged contact with. Her voice came back. “Exactly,” she responded directly to my thoughts. “When you live with a heart filled with love for Life, you see all for what it really is – a construct. To resist and argue with a construct would be just like resisting a movie you are watching. When you watch a movie and see pain and suffering, you do not identify with it. You know it is a movie and so you are able to remain an observer. The construct is like a movie and everyone is playing their part according to their choices. These are like roles in a movie. When you understand that, you understand that you have choice. You can either become one with the role and forget you are in a movie; or you remain in love with Life and observe all-that-is from the center of your heart on the screen of life. This requires complete trust in me.”

I was not ready for what was to come next. Divine Ma teleported me without any warning to a small animal stall where several baby elephants were kept hostage in abusive conditions. Several years after I started to meditate, my heart became growingly connected to all earthly creatures, no matter how small. I can't even kill an ant or a spider and have to go out of my way to carry them into the arms of nature instead of squishing them in the kitchen or the bathroom. But here I was facing the suffering of bunch of elephant babies, captured by an exploiter. I watched them and had a lot to say to Divine Mother, when she said: “Let go of the resistance you feel. Instead, focus on the desire in your heart that is born out of love for all creatures. When you see suffering, act from the fullness of your heart and allow a desire for betterment arise out of love, not out of anger or sadness. A desire for better conditions born out of love, will create an improved reality. This is how you can best serve creation. Expansion of love is how creation expands into a constantly evolved version of itself. That is evolution”.

At that point I believe I woke up. My husband put his arms around me “Baby, you were laughing all night. It must have been a funny dream.” “Well, not really, I think I was just shown that nothing is real and all that we know to be life is a construct.” But maybe laughter is the most appropriate reaction to the movie of our human lives.
